KOSHA invites public to create slogan for preventing four major fatal accidents

- ☐ KOSHA launched a public contest based on a theme, prevention of fatalities from four major vicious accidents, by inviting the general public nationwide in order to elevate the effects of occupational accident prevention.
- ☐ Anyone could submit suggestions for preventive keywords or slogans by each type of four major vicious fatal accidents (fall, trap, collision and suffocation).
- ☐ The contest ran for 15 days from February 1st to 15th, and contestants could participate through internet by accessing the Public Announcement under the News menu at the official website of the KOSHA (<http://www.kosha.or.kr>).
- * Website of the contest: <https://ko.surveymonkey.com/r/GMPN2QN>
- ☐ Awards and gifts would be presented to one Grand Prize (1 each) and two Outstanding Awards (2 each) for keywords and slogans by each type of four major fatal accidents, in addition to first 200 participants in the order of their participation.
- ☐ The results of selection will be announced at the official website during the March following the evaluation*, and selected keywords and slogans will be utilized for promotion of occupational accident prevention this year.
- * Five Criteria of evaluation: level of understanding, creativity, suitability, effectiveness and conciseness
- ☐ A KOSHA staff said, “we anticipate development of slogans allowing anyone to easily recognize through this upcoming contest.”

- ☐ And added, "at the same time, we hope that everyone in the nation pay more attention to occupational fatal accidents and take part in prevention efforts."
